In Arthur's place
The old chair stands alone,
In his room. The floor
Is covered with hours of sleep,
With dreams, more dismal
Than shadows that walk in
The dark of night.

The bed, where he has slept so long,
Is probably empty now.
He will probably never get
To another long sleep again.
He has completed his course,
Through that passing dream,
And will dream no more.
